Lansing – May 24, 2017 Success through a Compliant Winning Team #1 – Intro to Teaming

For small government contractors, teaming and joint venturing can be essential components of success. By teaming with other entities, small businesses can enhance their capabilities and offer more comprehensive solutions to the government. But teaming and joint venturing on government set-aside contracts is not without risk— there are many unique rules that must be followed, and many pitfalls for the unwary. In this series, government contracts attorney Steven Koprince explains— in plain English— the essential rules for joint venturing and teaming on federal set-aside contracts. This series also includes Carroll Bernard’s Intro to Teaming webinar, where he explains the value of teaming from the small business perspective.

Class #1 Intro to Teaming: We will define teaming, help you understand why it is so important, and explain how you can find and secure the right teaming partner to help you win, perform, and gain repeat business in the government marketplace. This lesson will include: Case Study; Importance of Teaming; Benefits of teaming; Types of Teaming; Choosing Teaming Structure; Attracting Partners.

Jackson – June 1, 2017 Government Contracting: Research and Marketing Series - #4 of 4 - What Do I Send Them?

I know who I want to market to, where to send it (class 1 and 2), but is there more that I need to know? This class will help you to understand who needs to know about your company, what you need to know about the agency and finally what to send to them. The federal government has specific things that they want to know about your company, so let’s make sure you give it to them. Then finally, setting up a scheduled time to talk with them and what will you tell them.

Jackson – July 6, 2017 Breaking Down Federal Solicitations - #1 of 1

For new participants in the government market, reading and understanding federal solicitations can be a bit daunting. In this webinar, we make the shift from finding the opportunity to reviewing, analyzing, and breaking down a federal solicitation.

After taking this class, you will become familiar with common language seen on FedBizOpps.gov as we define terminology, such as special notice, solicitation, award, pre-solicitation, sources sought, justification and approval, sole source, and fair opportunity/limited sources justification.

We also discuss sections within the uniform contract format, as well as tips and tricks you can use to ensure you are providing a “responsive” proposal.

Cyber Compliance and Risk Management for DoD Contractors May 10, 2017

The Department of Defense published a proposed rule in the Federal Register on June 29, 2011, to increase the strength of security measures and access controls guarding unclassified DoD information within contractor information systems, and set forth reporting requirements in the event of certain cyber intrusion incidents that affect either classified or unclassified DoD information within these systems.

In the event of certain cyber incidents, the clause requires contractors to communicate specific information relating to the incident, or as much of said information that can be obtained by the contractor, within 72 hours. A reportable incident includes any incident involving possible exfiltration, manipulation, or any loss, compromise, or unauthorized access to Controlled Technical Information within a contractor's system. Sponsored by PTACs of Michigan, MMTC, SBDC, MEDC.

TAKEAWAYS:

1. This new rule applies to all DoD contractors
2. Compliance is required by December 31, 2017
3. Don't be surprised or barred from contracting opportunities
4. Be ready
